PRODUCT DESCRIPTION LONG

The design of the Big Sur large table is restrained and unpretentious, allowing the materials—glass and solid oak—as much freedom as possible. It brings to mind California Mid-Century Modern, where warm natural materials often appear alongside materials such as concrete and glass. This association is reinforced by the name. The table is named after the famous stretch of coastline in California, where the waves of the Pacific Ocean crash against the cliffs of the Santa Lucia Mountains—a dramatic meeting of two elements.

Here, it is precisely the materials and the encounter between them that play the key role. The thick legs in solid oak give the desk weight and stability, while the glass, available in several colours, invites the light of the room to create life and dynamism through shadows and reflections—an ingenious way for designers Simon Klenell and Kristoffer Sundin to work simultaneously with the ephemeral and the enduring.

The tabletop and shelf are available in brown, dark blue, green, and clear glass. It is possible to choose different colours for the tabletop and the shelf. The oak legs are available in all of Fogia's stains.
